

ABSTRACT

A device for detecting a prohibited object in a zone with protected access includes a supporting base designed to receive a single foot wearing a shoe of an individual to be inspected. The device further includes a detector to detect a target material and a position- identifier suitable for imposing accurate positioning of the foot of the individual being inspected relative to the detector.